A 19-year-old reputed gang member has been charged with capital murder after he allegedly opened fire on a group of teens waiting to play basketball at a Venice-area park, killing two and wounding a third.

Michael Anthony Mariscal of Culver City was arraigned at Airport Superior Court, Department 144, last Thursday. Mariscal was charged in case SA078033 with two counts of capital murder with the special circumstances of multiple murder and to benefit a gang.

In addition, he was charged with three counts of attempted premeditated murder, one count of street terrorism and one count of possession of a firearm by a felon.

Lin said the two victims, Salvador Diaz, 18, and Allan Mateo, 19, were sitting in bleachers in Penmar Park with a group of friends waiting to play basketball on June 22 when Mariscal allegedly walked up and made gang references.

Mariscal allegedly opened fire on the group of five teens, killing Diaz and Mateo and wounding a 17-year-old male in the leg. Two other teens managed to escape without injuries. The shooting occurred about 4 p.m. at the park located in the 1300 block of Lake Street.

The Culver City resident fled the scene but was later arrested following an investigation by the Los Angeles Police Department. He is being held without bail. Mariscal's mother Elizabeth refutes the allegations against her son stating, "Michael was present at home in Culver City at the time of the shootings/murders, as well as at the time of the news was released to the public."

The special circumstances murder charges make this a potential death penalty case and Mariscal is being held without bail. Prosecutors will decide later whether to seek the death penalty.

He is scheduled to appear in court again on July 20.

Music Festival Gets Underway

AT&T Outlines Network Upgrades In Culver

Tucked in a non-descript building just north of Foogert's Tires store and right next to the 405 Freeway sits the next generation of cell phone communications.

AT&T has installed in the building network upgrades for the Culver City area and unveiled its plans on network enhancements for its Culver City customers and local businesses that will, according to AT&T representatives, provide faster speeds, increased reliability and best-in-class wireless service in 2011.

The building contains a high-capacity site which will provide customers in the area better coverage inside buildings and a higher level of call quality. The cell site is one of 10 cell sites in the Culver City area that have been recently upgraded with additional capacity to more efficiently manage available spectrum and increase mobile broadband in the area.

The site contains a diesel generator to backup the equipment should there be a power failure and in the case of a major disaster the generator is backed up by a wall of batteries to backup the backup.

"AT&T's continued commitment and investment into our communications infrastructure is an immense benefit to Culver City businesses," said Steve Rose, President of the Culver City Chamber of Commerce. "The network upgrades will make a positive impact in our day-to-day activities as we conduct business and communicate with our family and friends."

AT&T has also deployed 4G to its mobile broadband network in Culver City. When combined with enhanced Ethernet connectivity between the cell site and the wireless switch in Los Angeles later this year, the deployment will enable 4G wireless data speeds of up to four times faster than ordinary mobile broadband, enhancing the experience for customers and businesses who use the Internet or data-heavy applications on tablets, mobile devices or smartphones.

"We are investing in our Culver City network to help AT&T customers conduct business faster and more efficiently as well as to take advantage of the numerous capabilities of their smartphones and tablets," said Angela Gibson, Director, AT&T External Affairs. "We are committed to providing our customers excellent service to meet their daily needs, and we are backing that up with the right network enhancements."

AT&T's advanced network provides several important advantages for customers. Unlike some competitors, AT&T's mobile-broadband network provides customers with the ability to talk and surf at the same time. For instance, you can look up directions to an event while still talking on the phone, or browse your favorite social media sites while chatting with a friend. AT&T's mobile broadband network also is up to 35 percent faster than our largest competitor's CDMA-based network on average nationally.

NEW ONLINE DEGREE OPTIONS

To make attaining a Bachelor's Degree more affordable and convenient for working students and others, West has formed partnerships with prestigious Regis University, Brandman University (part of the Chapman University family), and Fort Hays University. Like traditional West students, our online students can complete the first two years of their Bachelor's degree at a significantly lower cost than at a university. Priority admission, and even concurrent admission, agreements allow West online students to complete their Bachelor's degrees, online, at the afore mentioned universities.

YEAR-END UPDATES

Bond-Funded Construction Projects

This year, students completed their math, chemistry and physics courses in the new state-of-the-art Math and Science complex. Also excited to move into the building were West's Nursing and award-winning Dental Hygiene programs. The long awaited road connecting the campus to Jefferson Blvd opened. Infrastructure upgrades were completed and will continue over the next two years. This Fall, the campus will open a 4-story classrooms building to consolidate and replace aging 40-year old "temporary" bungalows. A Student Service Center bringing all services under one roof and adding the first ever campus food court will also open this Fall. At various stages of design are an additional classrooms and offices building, enhancements to the PE/Dance facilities, and a building to house the cinema/television trades program featured in the LA Times and on PBS.

On-Campus Bus Service

West appreciates the Culver City Council's decision to continue Culver City Bus on-campus service in 2011-2012. At a recent meeting, the Council had the difficult task of balancing the concerns of some West neighbors disturbed by the noise of the buses entering and exiting campus with the needs of the college's students and employees, many of whom are also Culver City residents. The 2011-2012 schedule will be a 50% reduction to the old schedule. While not all neighbors or riders believe the new schedule is optimal, the campus leadership believes, as one Councilman stated, that this is a "reasonable compromise."

Faculty In the News

History Professor Patricia Seiver, also a Board Member with the Culver City Unified School District, organized Culver City's successful Martin Luther King Jr. Day celebration. English Professor Katherine Boutry's writing was featured on The Hub cable channel "The Haunting: The Series." She was also lauded in Inside Higher Education for her approach to teaching. Math Professor Mohamed Alwash, a prolific author who is frequently cited in scholarly research papers, was added to the editorial board of Journal of Applied Mathematics. CSIT Professor Ashok Patil spends his summers making award-winning movies in India. This Fall he released his latest film, a suspense thriller titled, "9 to 12."

Winning On & Off The Field

West Track & Field took both the men's and women's 2011 Western State Conference titles. For the women, this was the second consecutive year. At the State Championship, West brought home four top medals including 1st place in the women's 4x400 relay and 3rd in the men's 4x400 relay. Off the field, 22 football players transferred to universities around the country.

Assemblywoman Mitchell Hosts "Christmas In July"

Culver City Assemblymember Holly Mitchell (D-47th District) will host "Christmas in July" on Saturday at the Lower Olympic Forest of Kenneth Hahn Park.

The event is intended to provide a fun and healthy environment for at-risk children in the 47th District, promoting literacy, health and wellness. Children who have demonstrated improvement in school work are encouraged to participate in drawings for prizes, and all area children are welcome to join in the various activities designed to be fun, educational and healthy.

"As the mother of a child in our public school system, I see the challenges working families face in encouraging children to excel," commented Assemblymember Mitchell, whose district includes part of South Los Angeles. "There are plenty of events and drives held during the holiday season every year, but these children have needs year-round. People who care make Christmas happen, so we're making it happen in July!"

Children will participate in various Zones throughout the park, where they will be take part in different activities. Some of the zones include the Fun and Fit Zone, Reading Zone, Environmental Zone and the Health Zone, where free health screenings will be held for the children in attendance.

In addition, the day will be capped off with a visit from a popular "celebrity" Santa Claus bringing gifts and prizes for children.

For more information on how to participate as a supporter or sponsor, please call 310-342-1070.

Helping California Small Businesses Get a Share In State Contracts

Senator Curren D. Price, Jr.
Chair, Senate Select Committee on Procurement

As California emerges from the recession, many businesses will begin revving up for the better more prosperous days ahead, as will many small, minority and women-owned firms. But the latter have something working for them in state government that needs to continue - a twenty-five percent small business contracting goal.

That goal can be the key to ensuring that these small businesses ride the same wave back to prosperity and growth as their larger counterparts. It's something for which I am fighting in the State Legislature.

We want to extend a ten year-old, bipartisan 25 percent participation goal that was established by Democratic Governor Gray Davis in 2001 and re-established by Republican Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger in 2006. I believe it is important to ensure that state contracting officials have the tools they need to promote robust small business contracting with the state.

Gary L. Stevens told me that small businesses like his - CSH Planning/Stormwater Specialist, LLC - have a much better chance of surviving by having legislation that specifies the percentage (25%) of dollars contracted with the State.

He believes that a state law will be more difficult to eliminate than an executive order and preserve the ground already won for small businesses.

That is why I have introduced SB 67, which codifies the 2006 Executive Order by Arnold Schwarzenegger to ensure that the state continues to meet or exceed the 25% overall annual California certified small business participation goal on state-funded contracts. This is a simple but important boost to our state's small businesses.

This modest small business participation target has only been reached three times since it was established in 2001. Most recently, the Department of General Services (DGS) reported that in 2008-09, the state achieved its small business target by awarding $2.5 billion (26.88%) of the $8.92 billion in total state contracts to small businesses. But that's a big number.

Small business is a key economic driver of job growth and economic development and continues to play a leading role in the state's economic recovery. Maintaining a strong small business participation requirement on state-funded contracts promotes competition that helps control state costs and ensures that state agencies receive a good deal on their state contracts.

My legislation authorizes DGS to direct all state agencies, departments, boards and commissions that engage in state procurement and contracting, to establish a 25 percent participation goal of California certified small businesses.

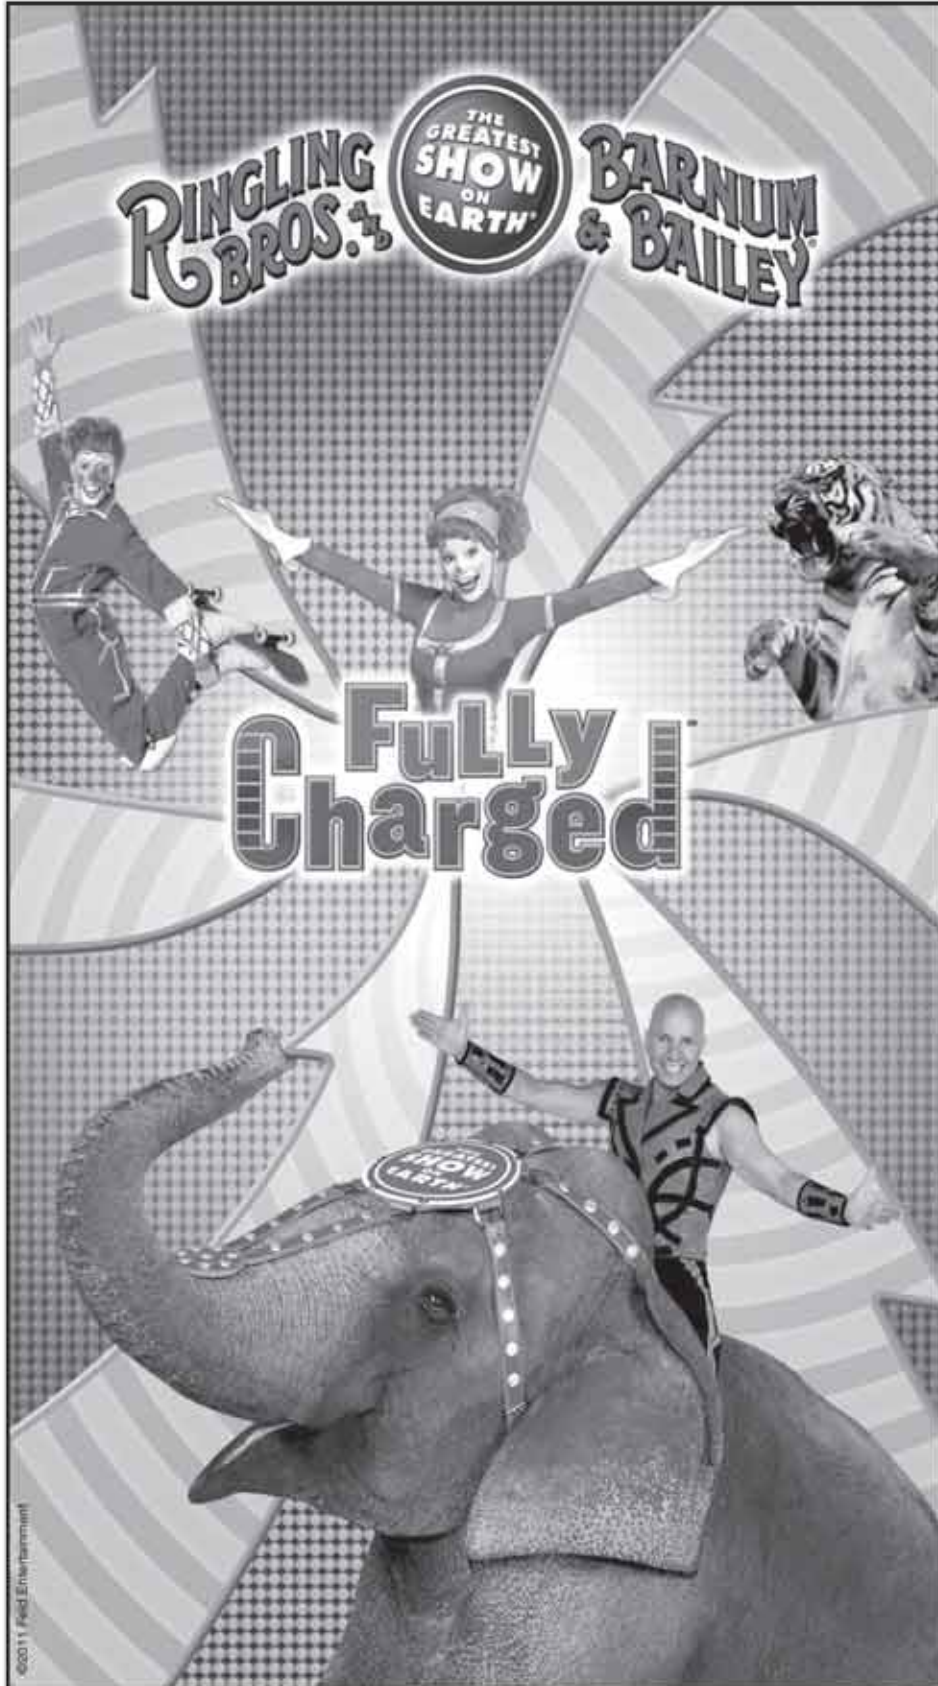

It also authorizes DGS to establish reporting requirements, and other policies and procedures, to evaluate small business participation in state contracts as well as establish corrective action plans for entities not meeting their goals.

We need to make certain that the rising tide of the recovering California economy lifts all boats, especially the small businesses that empower and sustain our communities and create the majority of new jobs.

Former Culver Defensive Back To Play for North Dakota

By Melanie Trup
Special to the Observer

Everything has come full circle for former Culver City High football star Chris Brown, who recently signed a letter of intent to play for the University of North Dakota.

Brown, who starred on special teams for Culver City, had this to say on his signing with the Fighting Sioux, "When I received the news from North Dakota that they wanted to offer me and fly me out, I was very excited and thrilled to play college football. (He took his trip last Monday, June 27th and returned home that Wednesday, the 29th) the trip was very fun, I believe the University is a perfect fit for me as well."

Brown then touched on why, "The reason being is, it's small and has a great program. Also, I'm looking to tear it up on the field. We also have an indoor stadium with packed out crowds!! But other than all that, I'm just thankful and more than grateful I have the opportunity to receive a scholarship and play Division 1 football."

Brown's mother Tammy also shares her son's excitement, "I'm very excited for Chris, he's worked so hard academically and on the field, he and I are really looking forward to it."

And of course, there was the moment that sealed the deal, "We were really impressed, the coaches were very nice."

Catcher Mason Mulvihill cannot dig the ball out of the dirt as Dustin Dehenny scores for North Venice. The Little League tournament is ongoing at Bill Botts field in Culver City

Centinela Hospital, Lasorda Expand Partnership

Tommy Lasorda and Centinela Hospital in Inglewood have agreed to continue their relationship that began in 1999 and expand it..

The Tommy Lasorda Heart Institute has provided a range of world class cardiac care to thousands of patients. The Lasorda name has elevated and extended the image of the Institute, while endorsing the quality heart care that Centinela Hospital provides.

The partnership is being expanded as Tommy is very interested in continuing his association with the cardiac program that bears his name.

In the upcoming year, Lasorda will be making several personal appearances at the hospital. Says Robert Chesne, M.D., Director of Cardiology at the hospital, "With Tommy's help we will continue to provide and expand our wide range of cardiology services including heart surgery, angioplasty and acute MI care to the communities that we serve."

NBA Lockout Is Especially Bad For The Lakers

Nobody can be very happy about the NBA lockout. Players aren't being paid and can't work out in their team's facilities Owners are cutting staff. Fans are outraged.

Mitch Chortkoff

It's especially bad for the Lakers because this is a team in transition and the off-season is very important. The Lakers have a new coach who will install a new system with the help of new assistant coaches. He'd like to get to work even on an informal basis.

Kobe Bryant has undergone an experimental procedure on his knee as he tries to prolong his career. Bryant will attempt to be the leader but will have some new teammates.

New coach Mike Brown is adamant that he'll expect maximum effort from players when he emphasizes defense. It's a sound concept but will veteran players be willing to do what he wants over the grueling 82-game distance?

It just isn't the best year for the league's labor agreement to run out.

Fans already had to adjust to the reality that the Lakers aren't champions anymore. As the Lakers try to claw their way back into the fans' hearts their supporters are asked to understand why millionaires and billionaires can't find a solution to how they'll split the money.

As I understand it, owners are asking for a drastic reduction in what the players get. The Players Union is merely trying to keep the status quo.

The owners are claiming that most NBA teams lose money. The players dispute that claim. They're not accusing the owners of doing anything illegal but they are suspecting creative accounting measures that claim questionable losses.

I guess this is standard stuff in negotiations. It's also standard for very little to be accomplished early in negotiations with the best offers being withheld until later months.

So expect this sad chapter in NBA history to go on for months and it won't be surprising if we end up with an abbreviated season.

I expect there eventually will be a season - maybe 50 games instead of 82. And I can't see the two sides being so stubborn as to miss out on the playoffs.

Meanwhile, everyone suffers. Rudy Garciduenas, the Lakers' equipment manager and a highly capable employee for the last 28 years, has been laid off.

When I ponder this news I remember being on the Lakers' charter plane many times when we landed around midnight in Milwaukee or Chicago or New York or Philadelphia in freezing weather. And we sat on the plane when Garciduenas, bundled up as best he could be, unloaded equipment from the plane to trucks.

I don't feel for the owners or players like I do for Rudy and other team employees. They're the real losers in this dispute.

Rudy Garciduenas

TERRI

Making its debut last month at the Los Angeles Film Festival is one of the indie charmers of the year, TERRI. In what can only be described as one of the warmest, most poignant and compassionate, darkly funny, wry and most embraceable of films, director Azazel Jacobs teams veteran John C. Reilly with newcomer Jacob Wysocki for the telling of a very special film about some ordinary people and some extraordinary relationships. Using the fertile ground of high school as a backdrop, TERRI is a coming of age story, no matter what your age.

TERRI is the guy that if you weren't him, you knew someone like him. Extremely overweight, but content in his own skin, TERRI is a guy you take at face value. He is who and what he is. Wearing pajamas 24/7, accompanied by the never stylish Dearfoam slip-on mule slippers (which do wonders for establishing a distinctive walk as you try to scuffle along and not lose your slippers), TERRI is the butt of every cruel joke and person in school. Appearing wise beyond his years, but still with the heart of a child, TERRI lives with and cares for his uncle who suffers from Alzheimer's, another fact which does nothing to help his popularity.

Blanketed in a home filled to the brim with tangible memories of his uncle's life, TERRI has developed an appreciation for opera, the stars, education, literature. Nooks and crannies are chock full of knick knacks, all with special meaning to TERRI and Uncle James. On medication for his Alzheimer's, sometimes Uncle James has great moments of lucidity, moments that both he and TERRI cherish. But then there are those times when TERRI becomes the adult, carries Uncle James to bed and tucks him in with his favorite aria softly playing in the background. And there are those times of confusion when TERRI must set mouse traps in the attic because Uncle James wants no mice in the house, but then is chastised by his uncle when he takes the mice out to the woods where he lays them as food for a hawk with whom he has established a "connection." The boy in TERRI always seems to get buried under

Mr. Fitzgerald is the vice-principal of TERRI's school. A somewhat nerdy looking guy himself with curly uncontrolled hair and a slightly frazzled personality, Mr. Fitzgerald appears to be a tough talking disciplinarian but somewhere under that outer crust is a guy generally concerned about "special" students, of which TERRI is one. Mr. Fitzgerald also takes great interest in a troubled young boy named Chad who spends his days pulling his hair out of his head. He also gets involved with Heather, a pretty, blonde, petite A-lister who is the long distance object of TERRI's affection. In fact, it's because of TERRI's defense of Heather when she is wrongly accused of sexual misconduct that she, too, becomes one of Fitzgerald's special students.

An understanding man, Mr. Fitzgerald knows what it's like to be on the outside, not be part of the gang, not be accepted. His school days were just like those of TERRI and Chad and Heather. The beauty of Mr. Fitzgerald, however, is that he is still just as nerdy as ever but, like TERRI, never sees himself that way. As Mr. Fitzgerald opens up to his young charges, they likewise open up to him, especially TERRI, whose bond with Fitzgerald is one of great friendship and admiration. And as the school term progresses, through weekly meetings with Fitzgerald and a glimpse into his home life, we also form a special bond with TERRI.

both hiss size and the need for him to be an adult so much of the time. But thanks to Mr. Fitzgerald, Chad and Heather, the boy is not completely lost.

Jacob Wysocki makes his feature debut as TERRI. Described by co-star John C. Reilly as being great at improvisation and having a "wonderful innocence about him", Wysocki is already a familiar face to many from the sitcom "Huge" and also his days of stand up comedy. But on the big screen, Wysocki is a breath of fresh air. Carrying the film together with Reilly, Wysocki is beyond likeable with an endearing quirkiness. Bringing a quiet reserve to the story and character through a nuanced, dry, non-emotive delivery, punctuated with facial and physical nuance, Wysocki walks the tightrope of sweet comedy. "Everything that I use in acting is from the fundamentals and philosophies that make good improv. It's all just about listening and give and take. I think that same groundwork is what made it so fluid."

And John C. Reilly. What can I say but, another great role, another great performance, and one for which he can thank his wife who brought the story to him. Filled with embarrassed emotion and humor, Reilly attributes much of his performance not only to Wysocki's abilities as a sparring partner, but to influences from his own high school counselor, Mr. Fitzsimmons and Reilly's own appreciation for young people. "I've always related to younger people throughout my life, even when I was younger myself. I think younger people are really appreciative when you treat them like human beings. That, and the journey of the character was very interesting to me; the fact that he starts off as this sort of official, very formal person and then you basically watch him crumble before your eyes until you realize...he's honest". Reilly is the glue that holds the film together. And his chemistry with Wysocki - - - I could watch these two go head-to-head all day long; their chemistry is that strong. According to Reilly, all of the kids in the cast, Wysocki, Zadina and Crocicchia, "gave me a lot of enthusiasm. . . That sense of optimism and enthusiasm and fresh eyes is contagious. It's much more interesting to be with younger people or less experienced people who just notice different stuff."

The supporting cast is equally accomplished, adding a great dynamic that lends new levels of authenticity and believability to the story. Bridger Zadina, also in his first feature, is a standout as Chad. He went so far as to actually have his hair chopped and cut and then pulled it out, keeping completely in character. Olivia Crocicchia walks a double edged sword as Heather; on the one side, cocky and arrogant but on the other, a fragile scared little girl. Very beautifully done. And then we have the incomparable Creed Bratton. A role unlike any in which we have previously seen Bratton, as Uncle James he delivers a great balance between living and being alive and disappearing into the rigors of Alzheimer's. A difficult role, Bratton attributes his performance to the fact that "I do my work. I jump in there and go for it. I had two relatives who had Alzheimer's, so I used that for the dementia part [of the character]." The result is very touching.

Written by Patrick de Witt, there is a truth, honesty and simplicity in the characters and the story. Everything flows organically. Nothing is forced or contrived. The story never "sells out" and retains a thoughtfulness as it progresses and each character grows. As a director, Azazel Jacobs keeps his eye on the ball, focusing on the relationship between TERRI and Mr. Fitzgerald. Key to the storytelling is that Jacobs and de Witt keep TERRI sympathetic and never make him the object of ridicule or self-deprecation.

Wysocki's background in improvisation and Reilly's own experience with improv in film gave them a common ground, however, according to John C. Reilly, "we didn't really improvise." However, for Wysocki "it gave us an availability with each other" and for Reilly, "a sense of play and sense of give and take." For Wysocki, sticking to the script was also key. "Staying true to the script was

Shot on film as opposed to going digital, the result is beautiful and really lends itself to the story. Cinematographer Tobias Datum gives the film a grainy warmth and softness but really strikes a chord when it comes to Uncle James' house which, although warm, is dimly lit with only one or two open windows, analogous to Uncle James himself. For Jacobs, "I enjoy having the limitations that film gives you. I like having to get things correct within a certain amount of time." Here, the films which Jacobs looked to for inspiration in terms of tone, including the classic "Being There", were all done on film and "I wanted this movie to exist alongside those."

Known for being "very hesitant to spell things out with the music" in his films, Jacobs never wants to have the music "push in either direction too strongly." "It's a good way for me to express internal situations that are going on in front of our eyes but at the same time I don't want it to be passing judgment." Thus he called on, for a third time, composer Mandy Hoffman. Quite impressive here is Hoffman's nuanced multi-instrumental score.

Touching the heart and warming the soul, TERRI is a soft-spoken story of hope and joy that makes the ordinary extraordinary.

Scholarship Fund Rewards 130 Students

130 graduating seniors from Culver City High and Culver Park High received scholarships totaling over $110,000 at the Culver City Community Scholarship Fund awards night, June 15, at the Robert Frost Auditorium.

The auditorium was packed with relatives and friends who cheered as each recipient was announced. Students are told they will be receiving a scholarship, but they find out which scholarship they will receive at the event.

Donors include a wide variety of service clubs, businesses, parent organizations such as PTA, and employee organizations from the school district and the city, as well as individual and memorial scholarships.

Donors selected their recipients in May according to their own criteria, which may include academic status, financial need, career goals, or Culver City schools attended.

For the first time this year, the Bettylyle Westbrook Spirit Award scholarships were given to 19 students, in honor of Ms. Westbrook, a former teacher and head of counseling at the high school and long-time board member of the Scholarship Fund committee and volunteer.

The Culver City Scholarship Fund is a nonprofit organization administered by a group of community volunteers who meet monthly from November to June.

There are two ways to donate to the fund. An individual, organization, service club or business can create a named scholarship in the amount of at least $300 and then a representative will select their recipient from among the applicants. In addition, the Scholarship Fund accepts donations of any amount for the Bettylyle Westbrook Spirit Awards. All donations are fully tax deductible.

For direct donations, checks should be made out to Culver City Community Scholarship Fund and sent to Culver City High School, 4401 Elenda St., Culver City, CA

90230, attention: Margaret Fujisawa, College Career Center. If you wish to set up a new named scholarship for 2012, please contact Margaret at (310) 842-4200, extension 3558.

Keswick Court Apartments in Culver Sold

M West Holdings announces it has acquired a 64,000 square foot, 60-unit apartment building located at 3902-3920 Lenawee Avenue, a few miles from the new Culver City Downtown.

The property sits less than two miles away from West Los Angeles College, and is minutes away from the new, and almost complete, Phase I Exposition Transit Corridor; this will be the first transit connection between Downtown, Los Angeles, the Westside and Culver City.

Constructed in 1959 and 1965, The Keswick Court Apartments is a two-story garden style, apartment community. The complex includes two two-story garden style apartment buildings, features two lushly landscaped courtyards, and a newly remodeled pool.

Similar to M West Holding's two previous acquisitions, this transaction reflects the company's strategy to acquire Southern California multi-family properties located in stable, in-fill markets.

The Keswick Court Apartments is within close proximity to desirable local amenities including restaurants, entertainment venues, and mass transportation. Located minutes from the Los Angeles International Airport, top Los Angeles universities, Downtown Los Angeles, and various beaches.

Karl Slovin, M West Holdings' President, states: "We are excited about the opportunity to continue our aggressive acquisition strategy in Los Angeles."
